

Editorial.

The decision to try to publish a magazine was taken by a group of Senior A² students some time before Christmas. It was debated by the whole class and it was agreed that it should be an all student effort. We therefore crave indulgence for any faults in the production which may be due to our lack of experience and knowledge.

At an early stage we had to decide between a magazine produced on a duplicating machine or one properly printed and illustrated. The latter was more difficult. Many of the difficulties we have learned of only by experiencing them. It seemed to us more satisfactory and when we were guaranteed a degree of financial support we took the decision.

The quality of the production may be uneven but it is a first effort and others, we hope, will profit by our errors and give us a better journal in years to come. We have been greatly helped by our printers, the Oriel Press. Mr. Ted O'Riordan has helped us with the layout and design and it is true to say that we would be unable to get the magazine out at any reasonable date without his enthusiastic co-operation.

We are very grateful to all who helped us, to the President for permission to go ahead and for financial guarantees, to Mr. John Whyte for ably securing and arranging the advertising and to all members of the teaching staff and student body who encouraged us in the work.
